Message from the Resource Connector North Board of Directors

Resource Connector North has achieved significant milestones in 2023 with the overarching objective of fostering economic growth in the natural resource sector for the collective benefit of British Columbians.

With the approval of the Board, we have undertaken initiatives to extend our reach and establish bursaries across northern British Columbia, encompassing institutions such as the College of New Caledonia, Northern Lights College, Coast Mountain College,

Thompson Rivers University, and the University of Northern British Columbia. These endeavors specifically concentrate on cultivating the knowledge and skills of young individuals to support businesses and resource projects in the northern region.

To enhance our engagement with supporters, Resource Connector North has leveraged social media platforms strategically. Interested parties can register online at www.resourceconnector.ca/membership/become-a-member, where new supporters can join, and existing supporters can update their business information. Moreover, we have bolstered our presence on LinkedIn through a dedicated webpage (www.linkedin.com/company/resource-connector-north/) and actively utilized Facebook (www.facebook.com/ResourceConnector) and Twitter (www.twitter.com/ResourceNorth) to disseminate information about RCN's activities and broadcast resource projects to our followers.

Resource Connector North's Board would also like to introduce three new directors: Confidence Ben, Lheidli T'enneh; Steve Sullivan, Vitalic; and Norm Adams.

We are excited to once again to be working with DEL Communications to develop our 2024 RCN Membership directory and magazine. Past issues of the Resource Connector North directory and magazine are accessible at www.resourceconnector.ca/resources/magazine.

Finally, one of most important accomplishment for 2023 has been the collaboration with Artemis Gold and promoting the development of the Blackwater mine project near Vanderhoof. Resource Connector North promoted several networking events in Quesnel, Prince George, Vanderhoof, and Burns Lake.

On behalf of the Board of Directors,

Fraser Deacon, President, RCN Board

Message from the Honourable David Eby Premier of British Columbia

A clean economy built with natural resources

Another year has come and gone. It's time to look back on our shared progress and the challenges we will tackle together in 2024.

In the year ahead, our government will continue working with resource industries to grow B.C.'s clean economy – especially in mining, with global demand for critical minerals growing. The world is taking notice of B.C. as a responsible supplier of natural resources, with lower carbon emissions, good wages, and working conditions for people and in partnership with Indigenous peoples.

B.C.'s Minister of Energy, Mines and Low Carbon Innovation, Josie Osborne, is a champion of this work. Minister Osborne recently attended the largest mining investment gathering in Europe to showcase B.C.'s strengths, and a new statement of cooperation with the Korea Mine Rehabilitation and Mineral Resources Corporation will encourage growth at all stages of the critical mineral life cycle, including exploration, mining, processing, manufacturing, and recycling.

Critical mineral development is just one area where our government is taking action to build on the longstanding strength of resource industries and create good, local jobs that families can count on for decades to come.

This year saw new opportunities for business, jobs, and growth in the exploration of low-carbon fuels, like hydrogen, electricity, renewable gas, and diesel.

In November, we launched a new, first-of-its-kind pilot program that aims to ramp up the use of hydrogen fuel in the commercial transportation sector. We're partnering with hydrogen-energy company HTEC to procure heavy-duty fuel-cell trucks and complete upgrades to a hydrogen fueling station and maintenance facility. The company will buy, test, and demonstrate heavy-duty fuel-cell trucks for fleet operators throughout B.C. – bringing us closer to a future that is driven by clean energy.

Low-cost, low-carbon electricity is key to developing hydrogen as a clean fuel. And keeping industrial hydro rates affordable is one way that we're supporting the resource sector to create good jobs for people while protecting our air, land, and water.

We're committed to keeping electricity rates stable and affordable. For the sixth consecutive year, BC Hydro has applied for a rate increase below the rate of inflation. Industrial customers are saving approximately $100 million this year compared to what rates would have been under the previous government's plan.

This year also saw the completion of B.C.'s first stand-alone renewable diesel refinery located in Prince George. Once fully operational, this project will deliver 170 million litres of renewable diesel each year, which creates 80-90 per cent less carbon dioxide pollution compared to conventional fossil diesel.

Additionally, our government issued an environmental assessment certificate for Cedar LNG, a floating, electrified LNG facility and marine export terminal on Haisla-Nation owned land. The project will be one of the cleanest of its kind in the world. It will also provide unprecedented economic opportunity for both the Haisla Nation and region.

Many generations of British Columbians trace their roots back to forests, where they have lived and worked. Forestry is, and will always be, a foundation of the B.C. economy.

We are helping to diversify local economies to make them more resilient through the transition from high volume to high-value production. This year, we doubled the B.C. Manufacturing Jobs Fund to $180 million and supported projects like a new mass-timber facility in Williams Lake, with 71 new well-paying jobs in the community.

Additionally, through the Rural Economic Diversification and Infrastructure Program, we've invested over $20 million into projects based in the Cariboo, North Coast, Nechako, and Northeast regions of our province. There's more to come with a second round of projects that will create new clean development opportunities, more diverse economies, and better local infrastructure.

Throughout 2023, resource companies have shown themselves to be ready and willing partners in building a clean energy future. In fact, they are critical to making this future a reality.

I'm looking forward to another exciting year for resource industries in our province. And you can expect another year where our government will work with you to create new jobs, leverage our strengths to grow a cleaner economy, and build a better future for everyone in B.C.

Message from the Honourable Josie Osborne Minister of Energy, Mines and Low Carbon Innovation

Sustainable growth and global leadership in British Columbia's mining sector

As the province and the world shift toward a sustainable, greener future, British Columbia's mining sector maintains a crucial role, significantly contributing to the economy and offering tangible solutions to help fight climate change.

We are already seeing transformation that was unimaginable not that long ago, bringing us all closer to our shared net-zero goals.

In 2022, industrial mineral and coal exploration hit a record $740 million, showcasing B.C.'s geological richness and responsible production of minerals and metals – including critical minerals.

British Columbia is well-positioned for the transition to a clean future, and our mining sector has a lot to offer to the world. We are geologically rich and are already responsibly producing some of the critical minerals and metals that are essential to fight climate change.

As Canada's leading producer of copper, B.C. aims to expand its role as a global supplier of critical minerals. The provincial government is actively developing a Critical Minerals Strategy to help facilitate the production of essential minerals like nickel and cobalt so we can add value and grow downstream opportunities.

Acknowledging the crucial role of First Nations in British Columbia's mining sector, the province emphasizes collaboration and partnership with First Nation communities. First Nations continue to drive advancements in the mining sector, highlighting the importance of early engagement and partnership in project development.

With a commitment to shared decision-making, the adoption of the UN Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples and being the first jurisdiction in North America to enshrine these rights into legislation through the Declaration Act, British Columbia is actively working closely with the First Nations Leadership Council and the First Nations Energy and Mining Council to modernize its mineral tenure system through the Mineral Tenure Act. This commitment reinforces the province's dedication to reconciliation and collaboration to unlock the full potential of B.C.'s resources and to create a stable business environment.

British Columbia's unwavering dedication to environmental, social, and governance (ESG) principles has positioned the province as a world-leading mining jurisdiction, offering stability and predictability for investments and operations. In fact, we take pride in having multiple initiatives underway that both support and share our ESG performance with the public and investment community. Notably, our ESG Centre of Excellence, coupled with cutting-edge digital tools like the Energy & Mines Digital Trust, empowers B.C. mines to demonstrate their product's origins and sustainability value. Environmental programs, exemplified by the CleanBC plan, actively promote the use of renewable energy in mining operations and incentivize the adoption of electric vehicles and machinery. These efforts underscore the province's resolute commitment to fostering innovation and sustainability.

Add to this our fully integrated port, rail, and road transportation systems – providing access to the largest international clients for critical minerals, our competitive taxes and strong fiscal and regulatory environment, electricity that's generated from 98 per cent clean and renewable resources, as well as a highly educated and multilingual workforce, and it's clear that B.C.'s mining sector makes for excellent investment opportunities.

For over a century, British Columbians have built a robust mining industry through hard work, dedication, and a commitment to innovation. As the mining sector continues to evolve towards a more sustainable, low-carbon future, collaboration remains key. The dedication to environmental sustainability, economic growth, and community engagement will continue to ensure that British Columbia's mining sector remains a global leader.

Message from the Honourable Bruce Ralston Minister of Forests

B.C.'s forestry sector is in a period of transition, one felt by thousands of hard-working people in communities throughout the province. For generations, forestry workers have supported their families through good, well-paying jobs and it is my goal to see that continue in the future. The global demand for forest products is expanding and our government is putting B.C.'s forestry sector front and centre, helping our workers become leaders in the manufacturing of higher-value products.

We have announced new programs that will assist companies in adapting their operations while continuing to create jobs and careers. The B.C. Timber Sales (BCTS) Value-Added Manufacturing Program and the B.C. Manufacturing Jobs Fund are examples of how our government is encouraging innovation and growth across the supply chain. Mills in every corner of the province can be confident that they are supported in the shift to the production of high-value products.

Forestry workers and communities throughout the province are also benefiting from new funding for the Forest Enhancement Society of B.C. (FESBC). With an investment of $50 million from the province, FESBC will expand funding for projects and programs that increase the use of low-value or residual fibre, including trees damaged by wildfires and harvest residue left over from logging that would otherwise be burned in slash piles. FESBC is a proven partner in delivering projects on the ground that benefit people and their families around B.C. while reducing the devastating effects of wildfire.

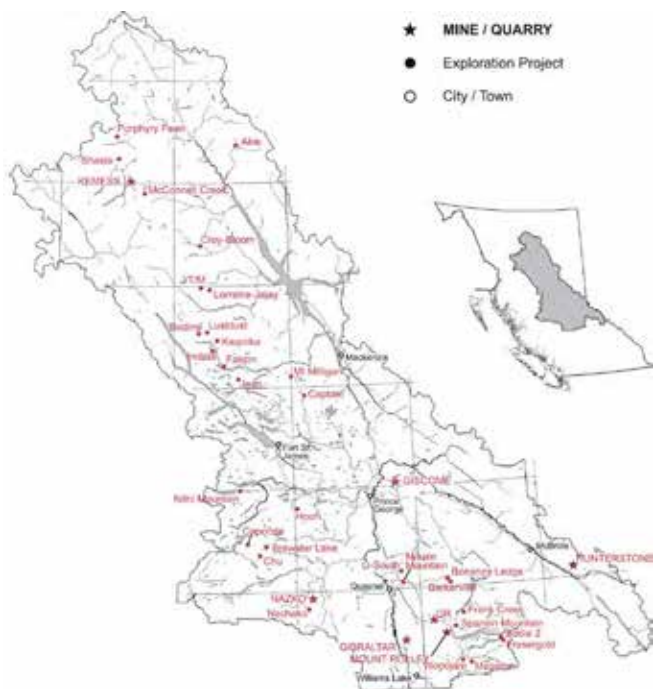

As the forest sector transitions towards a higher-value model, it is important to address the health of our natural landscape. We have invested $25 million in eight new Forest Landscape Plans (FLPs) with the goal of creating deeper engagement and greater transparency in the management of our forests. FLPs incorporate local knowledge and the values of First Nations communities and stakeholders into management of entire ecosystems. They are one way we can better manage forestry activities like harvesting and silviculture, while reducing the risks of wildfire and ensuring we have a strong diversified forestry sector in the future. Through continued partnerships with First Nations, local communities, and industry, I am optimistic that we are already seeing positive changes in the way we manage the long-term resiliency of our forests.

The unprecedented wildfires over the last few years took a toll on our forests and deeply impacted the communities that rely on them. This year, of course, we witnessed the worst fire season on record and a changing climate means that we can expect longer and more severe fire seasons in the years to come.

In 2022, our government made the largest investment in the history of the B.C. Wildfire Service and doubled the annual funding for wildfire prevention programs. We've also made changes to the Wildfire Act, giving prescribed fire legal standing in B.C.'s forest management tool kit, enabling the government to expand work with First Nations and other partners on cultural and prescribed burns. I am committed to ensuring communities and wildfire firefighters have the tools they need to help keep homes, businesses, and livelihoods safe.

Forestry workers of this province are the engines that drive the forestry sector and I know there are many challenges affecting them today. Facing the realities of climate change and shifting markets, our industry is evolving and we are ready to meet the challenges. Through the continued advocacy and involvement of all British Columbians, I am confident that our forestry sector will continue to thrive for the people of this province and solidify our reputation as world-class leaders in forestry innovation for future generations.

We Cover-All Your Building Needs

Our buildings are engineered for each site's snow loads, and we have our own in-house year-round install crews operating in every part of BC. Where permitting is required, our structures come with sealed, engineering that will meet BC Building Code requirements.

The versatility and affordability of fabric structures make them the go-to option. Our heavy duty hot dip galvanized steel trusses, bright interiors, many foundation options, and many customization options provide structures that work for your specific needs, for decades to come.

ANGUS PROJECT

- The proposed project would mine quartz arenite rocks in a pit/quarry then crush and transport those rocks to a raw sand plant
- Simple processing will liberate high-purity silica sand grains naturally occurring in frac sand (proppant) sizes
- Proppants are used in the development of shale gas resources such as BC's Montney Basin
- Located approximately 60 km north of Prince George, BC and 10 km east of Bear Lake, BC and 250 km south of Chetwynd, BC
